

Wood-Pawcatuck Watershed Association
203 Arcadia Road, Hope Valley, RI 02832
401-539-9017; info@wpwa.org

For Immediate Release

Date: February 26, 2009

Contact: Chris Fox, Executive Director

The Wood and Pawcatuck Rivers in the Blogosphere

The Wood Pawcatuck Watershed Association (WPWA) has announced the arrival of their new blogging site called River Watch news, notes, and observations on the Wood and Pawcatuck Rivers in Rhode Island and Connecticut. WPWA board of directors Vice President, Peter August, has taken his knowledge of blogging and his love of WPWA to create this informative and interesting forum.

The River Watch web address is <http://wpwariverwatch.blogspot.com/>. The theme of the blog is interesting news on the natural history of the Wood and Pawcatuck Rivers. The WPWA vision was to create a place to go to learn about wildlife sightings on the River, fishing news, paddling conditions, and other topics of general interest to WPWA members and the public at large. So far, there have been postings pertaining to otter, mink, a bald eagle sighting, and even a water quality on-line survey link. WPWA hopes the public will take a moment while browsing the internet to go to the River Watch blog site and read about what has been happening on their local rivers.